The demand for supplies of every kind was without precedent, and completely overwhelmed the office force. Twenty thousand of the round tags, marked with the Geneva cross, were used, as compared with 10,000 cross, were used.

Several hours were taken up last night with the counting of the money in the dif-ferent boxes. This took place at the Business Men's League headquarters in the Mer-cantile Club. Boxes began to arrive at 9 clock in the evening and continued to pour in until 11 c'clock. The Counting Cor tee commenced work at the arrival of the first box, and the count was not completed

Every man who entered was met by a fair sulleitor, and was not allowed to pass without contributing to the fund. So cleverly were these solicitations made that the con-tributor generally thought that a favor was being done him, until he got away from the group of ladies and took time to realize which they had read, and the that he had been separated from his money.

table walked about with badges of their generosity displayed prominently upon their raiment, and no one was considered really in it unless he could show one or more of the emblems of generasity. As in former years the spirit of friendly competition existed be-tween the ladies at the various buildings.

A notable feature of the collections was that all contributors were welcomed with equal cordiality. The messenger boy who disgorged his 16-cent piece was given as hearty and pleasant a reception as the banker who gave his check for a large amount. In the afternoon veritable receptions were held about the various collection places. Husbands, brothers, fathers and friends of the solicitors dropped in to discuss the day's incidents, and as a general rule the day's incidents, and as a general rule they left with several more badges in their possersion as tokens of their interest. For the ladies of the association the day was one of incidents. Hardly one of the workers is without one or more amusing stories to relate of her day's experiences. stories to relate of her day's experiences. Many of them ran across "stingy" old gentlemen, who had comical excuses to give for not producing their money. Others tell of out-of-town folk whom they canvassed, who knew nothing of the whole thing and appeared suspicious of the undertaking.

One thousand ladies' silk badges were handled, as compared with 600 in 1209. Many of these badges, which were worn by the ladies at the collection places, were auc-tioned off and brought from $5 to $10 each. A. D. The following ladies served in buildings without having accepted early enough to enable their names to be included in the advance notices: At the Union Station-Mrs. George H. Steinberg, Mrs. C. M. Warner, Mrs. E. A. Chenery, Mrs. George H. Hanauer, Mrs. E.
